Evil Blood was formed in 1982 in the then-split, Croatia, which was then part of Yugoslavia. Since their inception Evil Blood played extensively throughout their homeland of Croatia, Scandinavia, and Europe during the 80s; they made many T.V appearances on programs like Metal Mania for metal fans.

The band was voted top thrash band for five consecutive years in their home country and featured in various rock and metal magazines, including German magazines Metal Massacre and Metal Prophecy.

Evil Blood also played at the Live Aid concert in their home country. Their first full album Midnight In Sodom was released in 1989.

In 1990 Evil Blood relocated to London to try to further their career.

Evil Blood's 1992 demo was featured in U.K magazine Thrash and Burn's 2nd issue in 1992 where Malcome Dome described their sound as "raw, positively feral and brutal". Their demo was voted 2nd in the polls of the same year.

After relocating to Scotland in 1995 and going through several different line-ups/band name changes, Evil Blood has now cemented their sound, and with the current line-up since 2010 they are now based in Dundee/Fife Scotland, where they continue to gig regularly and have played support slots supporting Hirax, Master and Destroyer666.

Their most memorable gig was their appearance at Metalfest in Croatia in 2012, where they shared the stage with big names such as Megadeth, Death Angel, Fear Factory, and Kreator, to name a few. Also an appearance at Brofest 2 in Newcastle in 2014 with names such as Atomkraft, Blitzkrieg, Fist.
