

FULL MOON

The band was formed in 1985 by Gray and Angie Walker and recorded their first demo tapes shortly after. Throughout the following year the band began touring and built a large following, especially locally.

In October 1987 FULL MOON released their double A-sided single „Nemesis/The Eternal Now“. The record went to number 7 in the Italian indie charts and Rockerilla magazine voted it in on number 2 on their playlist and number 28 in the top 50 singles of that year.

It was through the success of that single that FULL MOON were signed to the Norwegian indie record company Voices of Wonder in December 1988. FULL MOON released their debut self-titled album in January 1989. It featured nine tracks (on cd two extra tracks from the single).

In November 1990 FULL MOON released a limited edition live album, which was compiled from recordings, with no overdubs, from a selection of dates from the band's UK summer tour that year.

In December 1990 the band signed to a new record company – Demi Monde.

Shortly before the band had made some significant line-up changes. The original lead-guitarist re-joined and the band had taken on a new drummer and vocalist. All the members feel that the new line-up worked really well and the new album is the best and strongest to date.
