

RAW MATERIAL

British rock band, formed in London in 1969. During their 3 year or so existence they moved from psychedelia and blues through to a complex type of progressive rock. Their music featured winds and keyboards in addition to the conventional rock trio, with a sound sometimes compared to King Crimson and Van Der Graaf Generator. During their lifetime they remained little-known in their native UK but had quite a bit of success in Continental Europe.