SILENCIS is the debut album by Transfolkloric, digitally released by independent label Marlee Records based in Catalonia, Spain.

Transfolkloric makes cinematic music discovering emotional soundscapes that watch and listen to the listener. Imaginary environments created through analog synthesizers and vintage drum machines, combined with electronic rhythms and experimental sounds.

Transfolkloric is born from the creativity of the music producer David Chueca Folch, with more than 15 years of experience as a music producer and author in bands like Jazzul, Et-Co*, Sonia Linares, Graham Newey. In this album, David decides to explore his imaginary in the creation of sound and the experience of reflective spaces, inviting the listener to sound and mental abstraction.

The fundamental creative process has been influenced by artists like The Cinematic Orchestra, Bonobo, Boards of Canada and classics such as Brian Eno. The main purpose has been to create unique and unrepeatably sounds in an experimental way with effects, synthesizers, rhythms and pads that are not saved in any preset, so there is no way to recover them back. They have lived only in that moment of creation.

Genres such as cinematic, ambient, reflexive and experimental music have a place in Transfolkloric.

The first single "Home" will be available on October 28th.

Full album "Silencis" will be released on December 2, 2022.
